“Grossman!!!”

I declare the global social space we are building to be naturally independent of the tyrannies you seek to impose on us.

You have no moral right to rule us nor do you possess any methods of enforcement we have true reason to fear.

One must spend at least a year after the first week in a new culture to learn as much as one did in that first week.

That's how fast we are assimilated.

"Human nature is almost unbelievably malleable, responding accurately and contrastingly to contrasting cultural conditions."

Margaret Mead, (Sex and Temperament in Three Primitive Societies (1935) p. 191

“The price one pays for pursuing any profession or calling is an intimate knowledge of its ugly side.”

"Whoever battles monsters should take care not to become a monster too,
For if you stare long enough into the Abyss, the Abyss stares also into you."

We are technological somnambulists wandering through an extended dream.

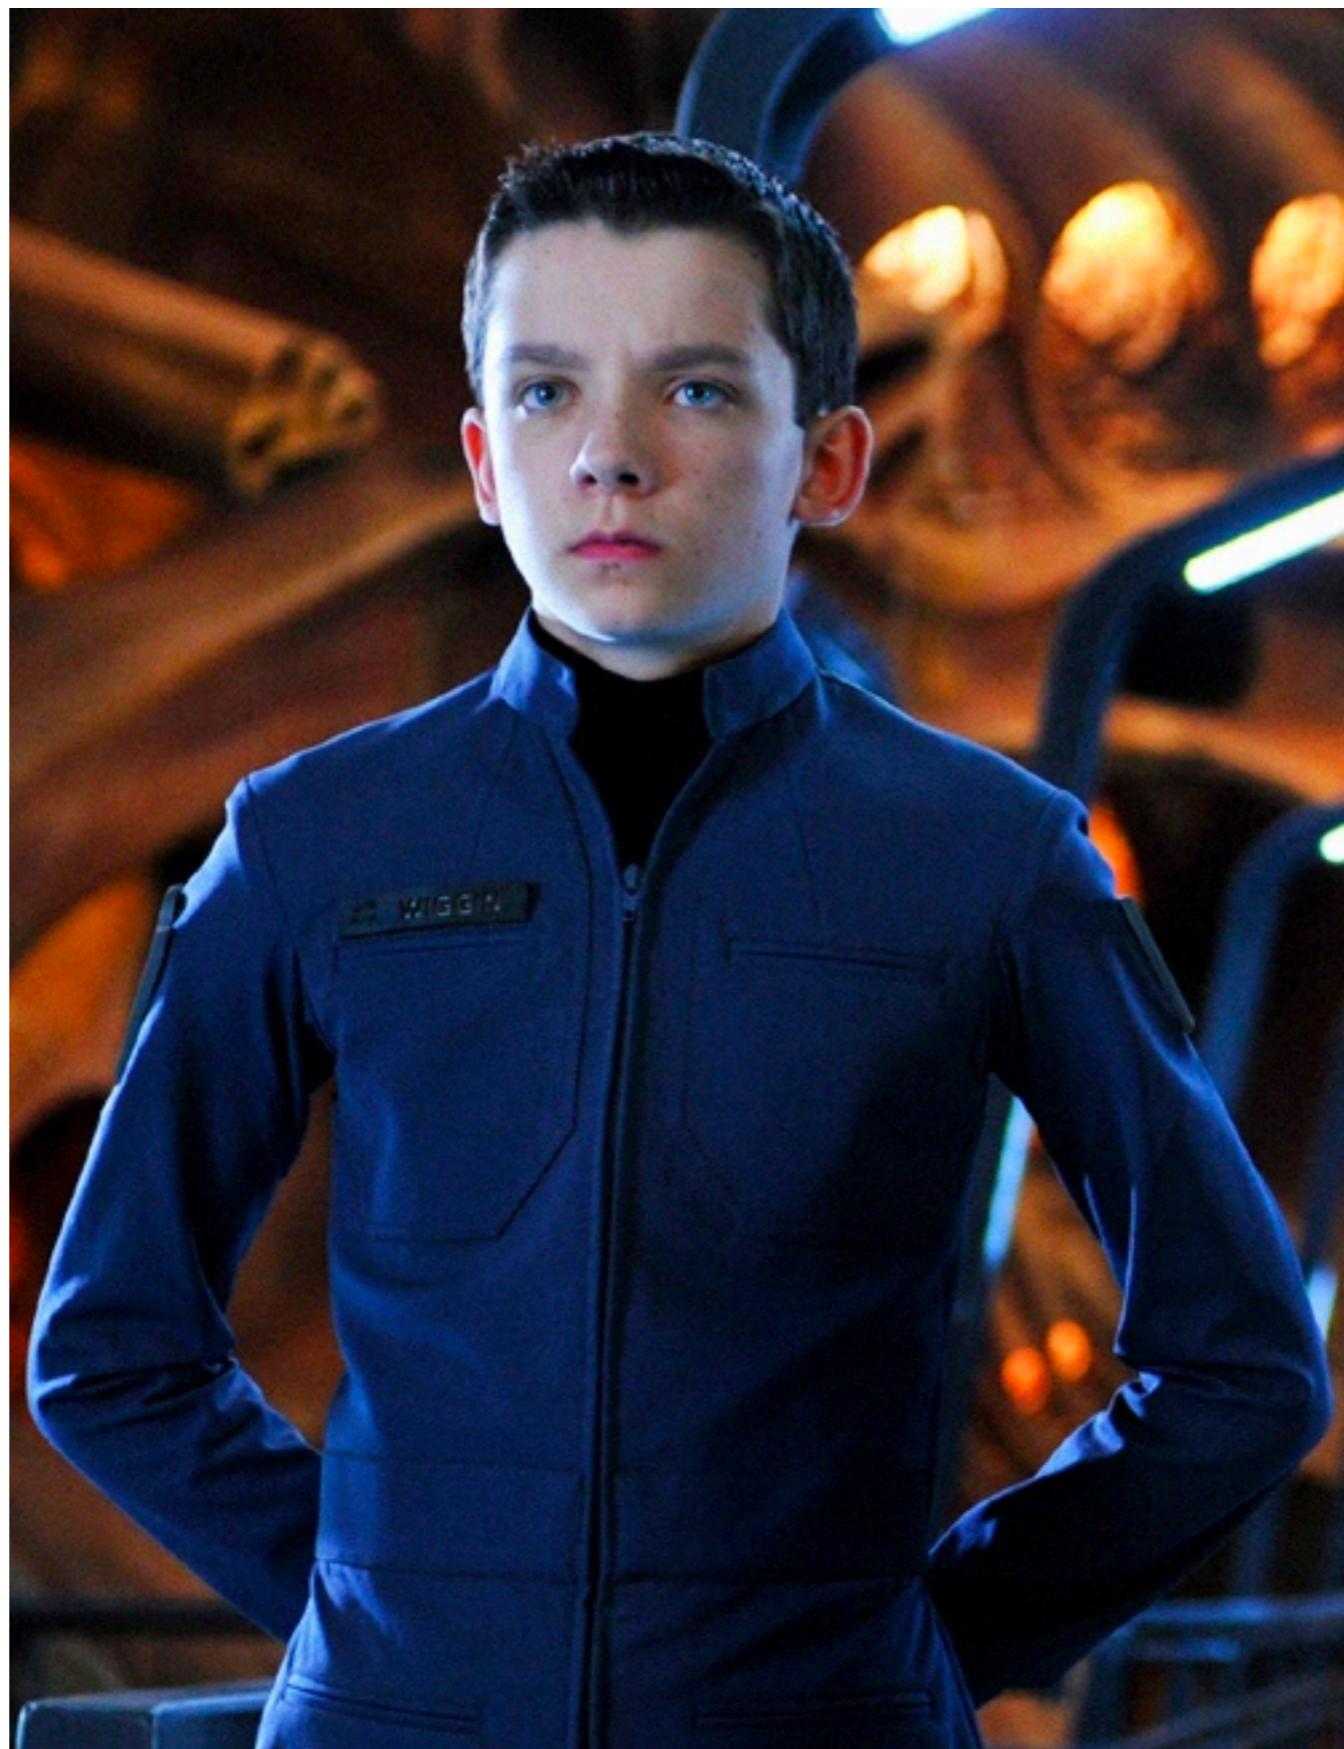

We don't know where we're going, but we're on our way.

The Hero's Journey. The hero encounters obstacles and barriers.
They can outwit them, run away from them, destroy them, or fail.
Failure is also honorable. All choices are honorable.
When she speaks of "we" there is hope. When we speak of "I" it emphasizes helplessness.

We can talk it out or we can act it out.

WHAT HELPS?

When I go to disaster areas, I decompress on the way out in a non-affected part of the country so that I can see the loveliness of the land and people.

After horrendous times in Indonesia, Bosnia, even Angola,
I found that I was restored in the everyday rhythms of life, coffee shops, a beer at sunset for a couple days.

In each place, local detox has helped me see the loveliness of the people and place.

A week in a small town with a decent fish market after six weeks with a parade of dump trucks of bodies in Indonesia post tsunami was the last test of a strategy developed over the years.

It sure beats breaking down in an upscale grocery market stateside because I got the cultural bends from ascending too fast from my first experience in a guerrilla war zone on the Thai Cambodian border. ==
